Stain Removal Old Wives Tale

The use of hair spray or worse yet, alcohol, is a frequently cited home remedy for ink stains and is one that firmly belongs in the unsafe, "old wives tales" category. The big reason you want to avoid it (even if it's worked for you in the past) is the risk of the alcohol "pulling color" from the garment, a condition that is impossible to reverse.

The safest stain removal tip is "blot, don't rub and bring it in to your drycleaner promptly for treatment".

Fresh stains are much more likely to be removed safely.
